"LOUSY CROOKS" SHOUTSZANGARA DYING IN CHAIR

Swarthy Little Italian Peeved When Cameramen Are Not At Execution.

WALKS TO DEATH IN HIS BARE FEET

Raiford, Florida, March 20 (AP)—Giuseppe Zangara, the little Italian immigrant who hated all governments, was electrocuted at 9:15 a. m. E. S. T. today for murdering Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of Chicago, in an attempt to assassinate President Roosevelt.

He went to the chair with the same defiant calm he had maintained since the night he fired wildly into a crowd assembled in Miami, February 15, to extend a greeting to the then president-elect.

Dies in Bare Feet

It was 9:11 a. m. when he entered the death chamber barefooted and dressed in striped trousers and white shirt opened at the neck. Two guards accompanied him but as he approached the chair Zangara said "Don't hold me. I no afraid of chair."

The guards released him and Zangara took his seat as though he were sitting down for a lunch, first striding over to Superintendent L. F. Chapman and handing him a sheaf of papers on which he had inscribed "Here is that book I have been writing."

"I no afraid that chair, see?" he repeated as he surveyed the 30 witnesses and attendants in the room. And then as the straps were adjusted about his hands and legs "No camera man here? No one here to take picture?"

"Lousy Capitalists"

Superintendent Chapman replied "No" just before the attendants placed the metal cap on Zangara's head.

"Lousy capitalists!" Zangara shouted bitterly.

Then he repeated "No pictures, capitalists! All capitalists, lousy bunch—crooks."

Attendants started to complete preparations for the electrocution and Zangara said evenly "Good-bye. Adios to all the world. Good-bye." With his feet not quite touching the floor and his head completely covered he then leaned back in the chair and relaxed to await the shocks.

One of the guards who fixed the electrode stepped back and said in a quiet voice "All right, Joe." With that signal Sheriff Dan Hardie, of Dade county (Miami), walked behind the chair and threw the switch that sent 2,300 volts through Zangara's body at 9:15. The little assassin's body stiffened at the first shock and his head gave a jerk upward.

Rain Beats a Tattoo

His hands clenched the chair. The current was turned off after three minutes and Zangara's body relaxed, slumping forward. Guards hastily released the straps about his arms and physicians stepped forward to make their examination. He was officially pronounced dead at 9.27 a. m. E. S. T.

A heavy rain beat a tattoo on the flat tops of the prison building at the hour of the execution. National guardsmen with machine guns occupied strategic locations and kept close watch on all who approached.

There was no immediate announcement as to what would be done with Zangara's body. He has no known relatives in the United States. He gave his age as in the early thirties. He was a naturalized citizen of the United States.

400 Persons At Bigler Supper

More than 400 persons attended the annual supper held by the Biglerville fire company at the Biglerville community hall, Saturday evening. More than $200 was cleared by the firemen from the affair, the most successful ever held.

One hundred and five chickens were used for the supper. Besides the chicken, the menu also included mashed potatoes, lima beans, cole slaw, filling, gravy, ice cream, cake and coffee.

Members of the Volunteer Sunday school class of the Biglerville Lutheran church served as waitresses.

Emory Funt, fire chief, was in charge of arrangements.

ROTARY SPEAKER

Daniel C. Jacobs, of Arendtsville, will discuss conditions as he found them in Europe during a trip abroad, at a meeting of the Gettysburg Rotary club at the Y. W. C. A., this evening at 6 o'clock.

Missing Girls Are Sought Here

Two Hanover school girls, missing from their homes since last Friday, are being sought in Gettysburg and vicinity. They are Beatrice Cramer, 16, and Evelyn Reynolds, 15.

After leaving their homes last Friday afternoon, ostensibly to go to school, the girls were heard to remark that they were going to Gettysburg.

Both are described as about five feet, five inches tall, weighing 118 to 120 pounds. The Cramer girl has brown hair and eyes and was wearing a brown polo coat, green plaid dress and tan sport oxfords. The Reynolds girl has blonde hair and blue eyes and was wearing a blue dress and dark blue coat.

A description of the girls has been broadcast throughout the state over the state police teletype system.

BIGLER PLAY ON THURSDAY

"The Brat" Three-act Comedy, Will Be Presented By Peter Pan Players.

"The Brat," a three-act comedy of contrast, will be presented in the Biglerville auditorium Thursday evening at 8 o'clock by the Peter Pan dramatic club of Biglerville high school.

The cast is, for the first time in the history of the club, an all-experienced one, with five seniors appearing for the last time in a dramatic production of the school.

Margaret Huff as "The Brat" and Elmer Hoke as "Steve Forrester," the misjudged son of a wealthy family, will play the leading roles. The comedy will be played around these two who are contrasted with Nancy Dill and Evelyn Thomas, two society debutantes.

The story is based on the experience of a young novelist, Stephen Forrester, played by Henry Walker, who in an effort to secure local color for one of his novels brings to his home a waif from a New York police court. The contrast which she offers to the scolal aims and habits of the novelist's family creates a problem for each of his friends. The interest that the youngest son takes in the waif further arouses the anxiety of the novelist's family and complications arise.

Special music will be heard between acts. The proceeds of the play will be used to defray the expense of the senior trip to Washington. Other members of the cast include: Ester Howe, Richard Walton, Harold Heiges, Mildred Sell, Gladys Dentler, Nancy Dill, Evelyn Thomas and Edna Garretson.

Meets Noted Friend Of Her Late Son

Mrs. P. M. Mishler and Miss Mary Himes, Carlisle street, attended the lecture by Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, lecturer, author and explorer, in York, Saturday evening. His subject was "Exploration in the Gobi Desert" and was illustrated with moving pictures and colored slides.

Before the lecture, Mrs. Mishler met Doctor Andrews, who was a friend of her son, the late Robert Mishler, when the latter was stationed at Shanghai, China.

Others from Gettysburg also attended the lecture.

Weather Delays Clean-up Work

Although Gettysburg's first clean-up week was scheduled to get under way today, the weather was so inclement this morning that Councilman C. W. Epley, who is in charge of the work for the borough, said the work will not start until the weather permits.

Borough employes will begin in the western part of town to remove tin cans and ashes from the alleys. Although placing the tin cans and ashes in containers will expedite the work, Councilman Epley said that it will not be necessary to furnish containers.

13 Boards Join New Tax Movement

Thirteen of the 32 borough and township school boards and road supervisors in Adams county have authorized the county commissioners to notify tax collectors not to return delinquent taxpayers to the commissioners, but to file liens in the office of the prothonotary for the collection of back taxes.

CHANGE OF RESIDENCE

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Golden have moved from 34 North Stratton street to 46 West Railroad street.

Plenty of New Money Here

2 Local Homes Are Quarantined Today

Two homes were quarantined for scarlet fever over the week-end by Earle Deardorff, Gettysburg health officer.

The home of Dr. and Mrs. John G. Glenn, Lincoln avenue, was quarantined this morning, after the illness of their daughter, Doris, 7, was pronounced scarlet fever.

Kathleen Dickert, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dickert, Stevens street, has contracted scarlet fever. The home was quarantined on Saturday evening.

Local Man Has Hair Burned in Unusual Blaze

Howard D. Williams, Hanover street, operator of Gettysburg's sewage treatment plant, had some of the hair burned from his head at 2 o'clock this morning while visiting his brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. George W. Bander, Harrisburg, according to an Associated Press dispatch to The Gettysburg Times this afternoon.

Williams, son of Councilman and Mrs. Emory C. Williams, was spending the week-end in Harrisburg.

A short circuit in a bed lamp is believed to have set fire to the bed clothing. Williams awoke after part of his hair was singed, and beat out the fire in his hair with his hands.

Damage to the room in which Williams was sleeping was estimated at several hundred dollars. The Harrisburg fire department was called to extinguish the blaze.

Scalded Boy Is Improving

The condition of George N. Redding, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Redding, South Washington street, who was severely scalded below the waist and on his right arm, Saturday morning, was reported improved at the Warner hospital today.

YOUTH BURIED THIS MORNING

Charles Elmer Currens, 12, Dies Of Spinal Meningitis Sunday Morning.

Following a two-week illness of spinal meningitis, Charles Elmer Currens, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Currens, Orrtanna R. 1, died at the Penn Hurst institution of learning, Philadelphia, Sunday morning at 1:30 o'clock.

As a result of the outbreak, the 1,800 children in the school are under strict quarantine.

The boy was admitted to the school on December 9, 1931, along with a sister, Pauline, 7, and a brother, Ray, 14.

The deceased is survived by his parents; a sister, Pauline, two brothers, Roy, Penn Hurst school, and Richard, at home, and the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kump, Orrtanna R. 1.

The body was brought back by S. L. Allison, Fairfield undertaker.

Funeral services were held this morning at Mt. Carmel United Brethren church, after interment was made in the church cemetery. The Rev. S. Fred Christman officiated.

Pallbearers were Ira Biesecker, Fred Naugle, Mervin Singley and Clarence Wilson.

Mrs. James Gladhill Dies Of Pneumonia

Word was received here today of the death of Mrs. Jane (Mosser) wife of James Gladhill, at Moorestown, New Jersey, Saturday. Death was caused by pneumonia.

Mr. Gladhill and his family are well-known in Gettysburg. Mr. Gladhill was graduated from Gettysburg college in 1894. His mother was the former Miss Nancy White, of Gettysburg.

AUXILIARY MEETING

The Sons of Veterans' auxiliary will meet tonight in the post rooms. An inspector from Harrisburg will be present and all officers and members are urged to be in attendance. A covered luncheon will be served.

Chilly Reception Is Scheduled When Spring Arrives Tonight

Rain which began falling in Gettysburg and Adams county on Saturday continued this afternoon with little hope of abating before Tuesday.

The rain is believed to be that which comes with the vernal equinox, spring beginning this evening.

The downpour over the week-caused Rock creek and other streams in Adams county to overflow their banks. Many cellars in various parts of town were flooded.

Spring arrives at 8:43 o'clock tonight and from all indications she'll get a pretty damp and chilly reception.

Winter is taking advantage of its last official hours by keeping the temperatures around normal and pouring lots of rain out of the clouds.

Spring pushes winter into the past at the moment of the vernal equinox. In simple terms, that is when the earth, circling around the sun, moves into such a position that the part north of the equator receives more heat and has longer days than the southern hemisphere. Spring will end officially at 4:12 p. m., June 21.

According to statistics the last winter has continued the trend of extraordinarily warm winters that has been going on since 1905 in the eastern part of the country. Temperatures have ranged, on the average from one to nine degrees above normal during the last three months.

Temperatures during all four seasons have been abnormal for the last twenty-five years indicating there are cycles of unusually warm and cold weather lasting over periods of years.

PASTOR LISTS THREE MEANS OF CONVERSION

Rev. George E. Snyder Explains Meaning And Tests Of God's Teaching.

ENTER KINGDOM THRU NEW BIRTH

"Conversion, Its Means and Tests", was the subject of the sermon delivered by the Rev. George E. Snyder, pastor of Cline's United Brethren church, near Gardners, Sunday morning.

The text was taken from Acts 16 30, 31: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

"Think for a moment of some inevitable things," said the Rev. Mr. Snyder. "If I go overland to California I must scale the rocky mountains. If I ever get sight of Europe I must cross the Atlantic. If I am ever to see the light I must have eyes. Just so, there are some musts in religion. Christ used the word must quite frequently. He applied it to this thought of the necessity of conversion. 'Verily, verily I say unto you, ye must be born again.' There are people who do not like that doctrine. But Christ made it as plain as any teaching. He said regeneration or conversion is necessary of we are to enter the kingdom of God.

New Birth Necessary

"We can understand how necessary the new birth is when we consider our sinful state by nature. We are dead in trespasses and in sin. We are not simply sick and able, with a little effort, to cure ourselves. We are not entirely able to save ourselves; but we are dead and can only live by divine grace placing within us and fanning to a flame, the spark of life."

Conversion must be considered from two sides according to the pastor. "From the divine side it is called regeneration. It is the result of an act by a power outside of ourselves. It is due to God's choice of us. It is due to God bringing his truth to bear upon us. It is a new birth, a regeneration, a beginning to live over again.

"From the human side it is spoken of as conversion. Conversion is simply turning about. It is changing from doing evil to doing good. Conversion is man's surrender to God."

The Rev. Mr. Snyder cited three means of conversion.

Soul's Reawakening

He asserted that conversion comes by teaching or preaching, by a reawakening of the soul due to such things as sickness, death or loss of property, and through faith which is the result of the intellectual outlook on life.

Concerning tests of conversion the Rev. Mr. Snyder said: "A man who has turned to the Lord will want to hear all about Him. A man converted will want to make immediate confessions of Christ. One needs to make an open confession for if we are ashamed of Christ He is ashamed of us. We need to love and strive for Him day by day. We must help others. When we begin to help others and help to promote the cause of Christ in the community, it is only then and then alone that we are doing the will of our Father who is in Heaven."

2 Young People Operated Upon

Two young people submitted to operations for the removal of their appendices at the Annie M. Warner hospital over the week-end. They were Robert Wormley, 17, Fairfield R. D., who was operated upon, Sunday, and Miss Kathleen I. Norris, 19, Emmitsburg, who was operated upon, Saturday evening.

Both are reported doing nicely.

Miss Sarah Wisotzkey, Gettysburg, and Mrs. Paul Clutz, Gettysburg, also were admitted as patients over the week-end.

Charles Stites, Gettysburg, was discharged as a patient.

Local Persons Are Unhurt In Quake

Mrs. F. E. Freeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Gilbert, Baltimore street, is safe and escaped unhurt in the recent earthquake in California, according to word received here this morning.

Mrs. Freeman reported that their house was shaken by one of the tremors but that they were not injured.

Mrs. Annie McSherry, West Middle street, has received word that her son, William J. McSherry, of Los Angeles, also escaped injury in the recent earthquake.

Final Rites For Hanson Lightner 2 P. M. Tuesday

Funeral services for Hanson W. Lightner, civil war veteran, Adams county court crier and retired businessman, who died early Saturday morning at his home on North Stratton street, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Bender funeral home, Carlisle street, the Rev. Howard S. Fox pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiating. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

Besides the survivors listed on Saturday, Mr. Lightner is survived by two brothers, the Rev. B. F. Lightner, East Middle street, and Edward M. Lightner, Cumberland township.

MORE THAN 2000 PERSONS VISIT EPLEY CAR SHOW

500 Rubber Aprons Are Given Away Within Two Hours Of Opening.

EXPOSITION TO CLOSE SATURDAY

More than 2,000 men, women and children visited the C. W. Epley automobile show, on its opening night, Saturday, and according to the consensus of opinion saw "the most colorful and attractive display of motor vehicles ever exhibited here."

The doors were opened at 7 o'clock and before 9 o'clock the five hundred rubber aprons, given to the first 500 women to visit the show, had been given away.

Sixteen automobiles, roadsters, coupes, sedans and limousines and six trucks, from a three-quarter ton size to three tons, are on display. Studebaker and Rockne machines and Studebaker trucks are displayed.

At the entrance to the display room is a huge horseshoe shaped welcome sign. Across the rear wall, in a circular sunset effect is a huge announcement in tinseled letters "Epley's Prosperity Show."

Colorful Decorations

Artificial and cut flowers are profusely arranged through the large display room. Each vehicle is priced with a large wooden price tag, the letters carved out in three inch size, tinseled and placed on the cowl of each machine.

In each sedan and limousine are special electric lamps suspended in the rear corners of the tonneau, illuminating the interior for close inspection of the machines. Ample space has been provided around each car to permit patrons of the show to inspect the automobiles from every angle.

One large sedan is raised to a 45 degree angle, the front wheels jacked high in the air with a mirror placed at an certain angle underneath the motor to permit patrons to stand erect in front of the car, look into the mirror on the floor, and see the set-up of the motor and the undercarriage of the automobile.

Moving Pictures

A bright red convertible roadster is wrapped in cellophane and trimmed with a broad red hibbon.

Moving pictures are shown of a Studebaker automobile rolling down a steep hill. This is to illustrate the durability and strength of the body of the car. The show is open all week, closing next Saturday.

Three sales were announced by Mr. Epley Saturday evening: Grover D. Yingling, Gettysburg R. 1, one and three-quarter ton truck; Amos J Harshman, Rouzerville, three-ton truck, and Marshall and Charles P. Bigham, of Bigham Brothers dairy, Gettysburg R. 4, Rockne three-quarter ton delivery truck.

The new modernistic design General tires are also displayed.

Admits Stealing Gas From Tractor

Ralph Ray Weidner, 22, of Cumberland county, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of stealing gasoline from a Huntington township tractor at a hearing before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer, Saturday afternoon. The alleged theft occurred last Tuesday evening. Weidner was frightened away after being fired at by Percy Gardner, police said, leaving the gasoline behind him. He renewed $300 bail for court.

WEATHER REPORT

Rain tonight and Tuesday. Probably changing to snow flurries in west and north portions Tuesday. Slowly rising temperature tonight. Colder Tuesday afternoon.

Young Woman Killed When Machine Skids Into Tree Near Here

Miss Ercell Gashnier, 23, Beauty Parlor Manager, Suffers Fractures Of Skull And Neck; Driver Attempted To Stop, Approaching Scene Of Wreck, Sunday Evening.

TWO COMPANIONS ONLY SLIGHTLY INJURED; MACHINE IS WRECKED

A comely young woman was killed instantly and her two companions were slightly injured when the high-powered roadster, owned by the former, skidded and crashed into a stout locust tree along the Lincoln highway, four miles east of here, at 9:40 o'clock, Sunday evening.

Miss Ercell Gashnier, 23, York department store beauty parlor manager, suffered fractures of the skull and neck and died instantly.

J. C. Robinson, 30, of York, who was driving Miss Gashnier's machine, and Landon Joyner, 24, also of York, escaped with lacerations about the face and head. Both were admitted to the Warner hospital, but discharged as patients today.

Car Skids Into Tree

The accident occurred when Robinson, traveling east, applied the brakes to the big roadster to avoid crashing into two machines, about 400 feet ahead, damaged in a crash about ten minutes before.

When Robinson applied the brakes, the heavy roadster swung around, skidded from the slippery highway and crashed sideways into a locust tree.

How Miss Gashnier, who was sitting between Robinson and Joyner, suffered the brunt of the impact is a question puzzling Corporal R. M. Stroh and Patrolman James G. Warren, of the local sub-station, who investigated the accident.

Joyner was sitting on the side of the machine which struck the tree. He was thrown out at the time of the impact or shortly before. He was found stunned a short distance away.

Students See Crash

Paul Smith, of New Freedom, editor-in-chief of "The Gettysburgian", the Gettysburg college newspaper, and Charles Anderson, another student at the college, who had stopped at the scene of the first accident, were the first to reach Miss Gashnier's car. Smith helped Robinson from behind the wheel and then lifted Miss Gashnier's body out of the wreckage.

Dr. C. G. Crist, of Gettysburg, was summoned, but he was unable to do anything for Miss Gashnier. The Gettysburg ambulance was called and brought Robinson and Joyner to the hospital.

Robinson, Joyner and Miss Gashnier were returning to York after spending Sunday afternoon and evening in Hagerstown.

Robinson told Corporal Stroh that as the car he was driving came over the crest of a hill, he saw the lights of several cars ahead of him on the highway and he applied the brakes, causing the roadster to skid.

Machine Is Wrecked

Miss Gashnier's machine was totally wrecked, having almost been literally wrapped around the locust tree.

Dr. Edgar A. Miller, Adams county coroner, was notified, and after viewing the body, permitted its removal to the H. B. Bender and Son funeral home, Carlisle street, where it was prepared for burial.

Besides the fractures of her skull and neck, Miss Gashnier suffered a severe laceration on the face and several minor cuts about the head. It is believed her head struck the steering wheel which was demolished.

Miss Gashnier's home was in Houston, Texas, but she was in charge of the beauty parlor at the Charles Bear department store, York, for three years.

Dead News In Paper

Miss Gashnier's parents in Houston first learned of their daughter's death in an Associated Press dispatch from Gettysburg which appeared in a Houston paper this morning. The young woman's mother called the Bender funeral home to confirm the information and to make arrangements for sending the body to Houston.

In the first accident, a light roadster, driven by J. W. Cowan, 210 Carlisle street, a senior at Gettysburg college, crashed head-on into the side of a light coach driven by Lloyd W. Rocks, of Williams, Arizona.

Cowan, accompanied by Miss Margaret Tate, Carlisle street, and James Heaton, another student, was traveling west on the highway at a reported speed of 40 miles an hour.

A few minutes before, Rocks, accompanied by two women and two children, applied the brakes to his machine after the engine stalled, and the car skidded sideways on the highway.

Did Not See Machine

Cowan, coming over the crest of a hill, was unable to see the lights of the Arizona man's machine, and before he was able to swerve his roadster, the crash occurred.

None of the occupants of either car was injured, but both machines were so badly damaged they had to

H. B. HOFFMAN DIES ON SUNDAY

Straban Township Farmer Expires Of Complication Of Diseases.

Harvey B. H. Hoffman, 41-year-old farmer of Straban township, died at 2:30 o'clock, Sunday morning, at the local hospital, of a complication of diseases. Mr. Hoffman was removed to the hospital on Friday in a serious condition and little hope was held at that time for his recovery.

He was born near New Oxford, a son of the late Benjamin F. and Susan Mummert Hoffman and resided in Adams county all his life. He has been farming in Straban township for the past 18 years.

The deceased is survived by his mother, who resided with him; his widow, Mrs. Louise Marie Reynolds Hoffman; two daughters, Mary Catherine and Helen Elizabeth; two sons, Milton Reynolds Hoffman and Daniel William Hoffman, at home; three brothers, Robert Hoffman, of York Springs R. D.; John Hoffman and Albert Hoffman, Dillsburg R. D., and one sister, Mrs. George Shelleman, Gettysburg R. D.

He was a life-long member of the Reformed church of Gettysburg.

Funeral services Wednesday afternoon from his late home at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Howard S. Fox officiating, with interment in Evergreen cemetery.

Small Blaze In Old Dorm

About $50 damage was caused by fire just inside the main entrance to "Old Dorm" on the Gettysburg college campus at 4:15 o'clock this morning.

The fire is believed by firemen to have started in a waste-paper basket in the hall. The flames communicated with the wainscoating and had gained some headway before students discovered the fire.

With the aid of a hand chemical apparatus at the college water, the students had the fire extinguished before the Gettysburg fire company arrived.

Writes 2 Articles For Gotham Paper

Two articles by Miss Gisela Grimm, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Karl J. Grimm, Baltimore street, appeared in a special flower show section of the New York Herald-Tribune, Sunday. The special section was published in connection with the International flower show being held in New York city this week.

Miss Grimm, who is spending the week at the flower show, wrote articles on "Violas" and "Pruning of Roses."

SAVES CHILD IN RUNAWAY

Lancaster, March 18.—Roy Jenkins, Pequa, R. D. 1, was seriously injured when he clung to the reins of a pair of runaway mules Thursday in an effort to save his 3-year-old daughter, who was riding with him in the farm wagon

The mules shied at a motortruck and ran away. Jenkins was thrown from the wagon and landed beneath the wheels He suffered a crushed shoulder and deep lacerations in the head.

The child fell from the wagon but escaped with slight injuries

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Frightened by the amorous advances of Raisul, son of the Kaid of Mekerzen, Margaret Maligni is forced to go for aid to a German agent in Mekazzen. He suggests that in return Margaret tell him what she learns from Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion, ostensibly on a mission from France to the Kaid, but actually a traitor. Margaret's husband, Jules, has become detestable to her; in Riccoli's command is Otho Belleme, Margaret's first sweetheart. Riccoli tells her of the exploits of another traitor to France.

Chapter 36

ANOTHER CROWN

"Think of it, Mademoiselle. That alone shows what a man Vauroi was and to what power he rose.

"They might call the state, the kingdom, that he founded, a robber-republic of which he was the worst and wickedest robber, but the fact remains, he had first to make war upon him, and then, having failed to defeat him, they sent a mission to negotiate with him.

"What became of him? Nobody knows, or rather, as I said, no European knows. But one thing is certain, neither he, nor any man of his battery was ever seen by a white man again.

"Think of it, Mademoiselle . . ."

And while he, too, thought of it, Major Riccoli, with apparent absence of mind, put his right arm about Margaret's waist and then with obvious presence of mind, put his left hand beneath her chin, tipped up her face and drew her closely to him.

With equal presence of mind, Margaret wriggled free.

"Madame Maligni," he said reproachfully, "Margaret, I have fallen in love with you. I love you. My first love and love at first sight. Do you love me?"

"Not yet, Major Riccoli."

"Margaret, could you love me?"

"I don't know, Major Riccoli."

"Ah, but you do not know. You call me Major Riccoli, but that I shall not be for long. Do you know my other name?"

"I'm afraid not, Major Riccoli."

"Napoleon."

"How terribly interesting."

"Yes, it is, as you say, interesting, and as you say, it shall be terrible. Not for nothing am I a Napoleon, a Corsican, a soldier. My namesake and prototype made a humble colonial wench an empress; the obscure gentleman of Bordeaux whom you mentioned tonight, made a notary's daughter a queen; Voulet, a mere captain, would have made Tamarne an Empress, had he lived; doubtless Vauroi has raised some dusky desert-girl to be as a second queen of Sheba."

Again the eloquent speaker placed his arm about Margaret's waist.

"Margot," he whispered, "would you be a queen?"

"I don't think so, Major Riccoli."

"Margot! There was a Queen Margot, as you know. Will you be my queen?"

"I'm afraid I'm not eligible, Major Riccoli."

"Eligible? You? Margaret, You? "I, I fancy, am worthy of you. And you—are worthy of me. So beautiful, so witty, so charming, so clever—for you are a clever woman as well as a lovely one—why, you and I, Marg'ret, are a pair. Nay, we are one. Soon I shall be Riccoli the Great. You are Margaret the Beautiful. Be my queen."

Margaret rose to her feet, turned round once, and sat down again, free from the urgent, encircling arm.

"But however beautiful I may be, and however great you are, Major Riccoli," she protested. "I really am not eligible. I think you met my husband at dinner."

"Husbands? Pah! What are husbands?"

"Well—er——" began Margaret. "Husbands are rather . . ."

"To the devil with husbands. The man I saw at dinner may be a perfectly good Monsieur Maligni, and your husband, but I am Major Napoleon Riccoli, and your lover."

Margaret coughed slightly.

"That, and more, far more." And Major Riccoli spoke of generals field-marshals, conquerors, dictators, and of successful men who would be kings.

"Husbands," he concluded, "what are they to me—and to you?"

Margaret thought of what her husband was to her.

"Husbands? Had not Napoleon's Josephine a husband? And did that trouble Napoleon? Would it trouble me?"

"It might trouble you, Major Riccoli. I don't know, but it might."

Major Riccoli laughed and flicked an imaginary husband into the air.

Looking up as she did so, he discovered that a very large man, Arab or Moor, was standing before him, a man whose face was hidden in the shadow of his hood but whose voice seemed familiar when he begged permission to interrupt him, and to announce that his Excellency the Kaid would speak with his guest upon matters of the utmost importance.

"Pest!" said Major Riccoli.

And,

"Good night, Major Riccoli," said Margaret.

As the dapper Major Riccoli, on his way to the hall of audience, descended the steps that led down from Margaret's walk, to the formal, artificial and somewhat pathetic garden, sacred to the use of the household, the big "Moor" turned to Margaret, threw back his hood; and smiled his friendly beam of greeting.

"Well, Mademoiselle?" he said in French. "This is a good spot for a quiet talk. We shan't be disturbed or seen here. Clever Mademoiselle."

"Not Fraulein, or Frau, Herr Schlacht?" answered Maragret, desirous of discovering, if she could, why this man whom she instinctively trusted, talked sometimes in German, sometimes broken German-English, sometimes German-French, tometimes perfect French, and sometimes excellent English.

"No, Mrs. Maligni. No more Fraulein, nor Frau. And no more Herr Schlacht between us. We're friends, and we're going to be partners, and we'll talk in English. We're going to help each other. Now, you tell me exactly what Riccoli said to you—and then I am going to tell you the truth about myself. Cards on the table, eh?"

"Yes," agreed Margaret. "Major Riccoli said nothing about respecting confidences, or indeed that he was being confidential. In fact, he rather gave me the impression that he'd said it all before, and perhaps many times."

'Herr Schlacht' laughed.

"Clever girl. He has said some of it before, we may be quite sure. Did he rise to the bait of the man who made himself a king?"

"You should have heard him! And he was equally eloquent on the subject of a Captain Vauroi."

"Oho! This is really helpful, Margaret. May I call you that?"

"Of course."

"Really helpful, interesting and valuable. Tell me all about it."

"I'll do my best to remember every word," replied Margaret, and did so.

"Oh, splendid!" commented 'Herr Schlacht' when she had finished her story. "I think that quite settles it. Now I really do know where I am."

"And where are you?" asked Margaret.

"Just exactly where I though I was," smiled 'Herr Schlacht.' "And now I'll tell you something in return. And something that I hope will help you as much as you've helped me."

"God knows I want help," said Margaret. "Someone to whom I can turn, and whom I can trust."

The man put his big hand over hers.

"You can trust me," he said, "as I trust you. Listen. I am a French officer, Colonel Le Sage, secret service, in fact; and I'm here on a very special job.

"I'm telling you this because I know that wild horses wouldn't drag it out of you, and because I want to win your complete trust by giving you mine. I have lived in England, and I know your type. Margaret, both intuitively and from observation. As I have said, I want your help. And as I have promised—you can count on mine—absolutely. The position's this.

"The Kaid, like his father, has been a nuisance, an embarrassment, and a danger, to France, ever since she began to extend her sphere of influence and civilization in this direction. Like his father he has been a thorn in the side of the military authorities, a constant menace, and an ever-present cloud on their horizon.

"And now it's going to end. It's going to end because he has become an anachronism; because he presumes to hinder France's great work in Africa; because he is trying to bring Germany and Italy into this part of the world, and turn the march of progress into a dog-fight; and because his son bids fair to be a far bigger, and far more dangerous, enemy.

"And that young man is neither mad nor a megalomaniac, but he intends to be Sultan of Morocco and that merely for a start."

AMUSEMENTS

Eight stars, each playing the type of role in which he or she has won the greatest success, bring Phil Stong's popular novel, "State Fair," to the screen of the Majestic theater Monday and Tuesday Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory are the stars of the Fox production.

Miss Gaynor and Ayres are the lovers of a romance between a little farm girl and a dashing newspaper reporter, and Miss Eilers and Foster are the principals of another affair, said to be as intense as it is unconventional. Rogers has what is reported as the greatest comedy role of his career, that of a midwest farmer whose great ambition is to land a grand championship for his prize hog, Blue Boy. Miss Dresser takes the part of Rogers' wife. Craven appears as a country storekeeper and Jory portrays a carnival stand barker.

The action locales are Rogers' farm home and the grounds of a big state fair.

RETIRED BANKER SEIZED

Berlin, March 18 (AP).—Paul von Gontard, 68, wealthy retired industrial banker, whose wife is the former Clara Busch, daughter of Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis, was arrested Thursday on a charge of tax evasion and failure to declare funds at Dutch and Swiss banks.

He asserted the funds in question belong to his wife, and hence their declaration is not required of him. His home, in the fashionable Bendlerstasse, was searched and his banking accounts and property near Berlin were tied up. He is ill, so the police took him to the Moabit hospital.

NEW PRESIDENT OF REICHSBANK

Dr. Hans Luther Resigns After Stormy Session; Dr. Schacht Named.

Berlin, March 18.—Dr. Horace Greeley Hjalmar Schacht became president of the Reichsbank Thursday succeeding Dr. Hans Luther who resigned after an agitated sitting of Reichsbank directors which lasted nearly five hours.

Thus Schacht, stormy petrel of German finance and politics, who quit the Reichsbank presidency in protest against German acceptance of the Young plan, returns to much more power than any Reichsbank president ever had.

In the last three years Schacht has developed into Adolf Hitler's right-hand man and now he steps into the open as supreme economic adviser of the Nazi government. Schacht likes to tell friends he is named after one of America's greatest republicans and those who seek a clue to Hitler's program are looking to Schacht.

Two things are known of his intentions. First, he will stick to the gold standard. Second, he favors large credit expansion and controlled currency expansion, differing violently with Luther, who frowned on anything smacking of inflation.

Luther fought like a lion to retain his position, and only a few weeks ago told friends nothing could put him out but a company of Reichswehr. After Hitler's gigantic election victory, however, Luther was forced to give up despite the fact he legally is entitled to another year in office.

Presidency of the Reichsbank, at $60,000 a year, is the best paid public job in Germany.

MITCHELL INCOME TAX STUDIED BY CUMMINGS

Washington, March 18 (AP).—The income tax figures submitted in 1929 by Charles E. Mitchell, resigned chairman of the board of the National City bank of New York, are under close scrutiny by Attorney General Cummins.

George Z. Medalie, United States attorney for New York, laid before Cummins the result of his two weeks' investigation of the banker's stock transactions which Mitchell told the senate committee he charged against his tax payments.

In his testimony Mitchell said he sold 18,000 shares of the bank stock to a relative, taking a loss of $2,800,000 and deducting this from his tax return. Later he bought the stock back.

ROOSEVELT IS PRAISED IN 14,000 TELEGRAMS

Washington, March 18 (AP)—A new White House record: Twelve days in office and President Roosevelt has received 14,000 telegrams praising his actions

And here's a record too: 1500 telegrams were said there to have supported his veterans' and federal pay cut economy program, while only thirty-nine disapproved.

The peak of this business was reached after the president's address explaining in simple terms what the banking situation was and why.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren — Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Margaret Maligni, beset by foreign terrors in the Citadel of Mekazzen, discovers that the "German" from whom she received her only help is really Col. Le Sage of the French Secret Service. He declares that Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion, who just has offered Margaret a hypothetical crown, plots treachery to France with the powerful Kaid of Mekazzen. Unknown to Margaret, Otto Belleme, her first sweetheart, is a soldier in Riccoli's command.

Chapter 37

MORE TREACHERY

"And Fate will have her little joke, won't she?" Le Sage added.

"I haven't seen many pokes lately," murmured Margaret.

"Naturally it's a bigger joke to men than to you, but I'm sure you'll see a humorous side to it.

"Out of a welter of treachery, the treachery of the Kaid and Raisul to Riccoli, and of him to them; the treachery of the Malignis to the Kaid, and the treachery of Riccoli to France, comes the downfall of the lot of them, and the removal of the obstacle to France's civilizing march.

"From their efforts at war, comes peace—final peace, in this desert that shall blossom like a rose."

"The treachery of the Malignis? Why, what do"— asked Margaret.

"Yes, my dear, black base treachery. Shall I tell you?"

"Tell me everything, please. The more I know, the more I can perhaps help, and the freer I shall be to do so."

"Well, the organization of which I am the head, in this part of the world, discovered that the Kaid was dallying with Germany. Or put it the other way about, if you like. Anyhow, there were overtures, proposals and an understanding.

"It was arranged that one of Germany's best men should come and see the Kaid, come to a definite agreement—make a treaty with him, in fact.

"The Kaid was to get money, men and munitions, on the understanding that he used the men and munitions, and at any rate part of the money, to make war—any old war that should 'trouble the waters,' and especially war that would make him Sultan of Morocco, worry and embarrass France, and generally, as I said—'trouble the waters.'

"Then of course, Germany was going to fish in the troubled waters—fish for cast mineral concessions, among other things, as soon as the Kaid was Sultan of Morocco, or indeed, as soon as he was strong, and France and Spain were weak, in Morocco.

"And so Germany was sending this good man, one of their best, a real stormy petrel, with the highest courage, the greatest ability and the widest experience. Secret service, of course, with no overt backing, countenance, or support from home. If he succeeded, so much the better for Germany and himself. If he failed and were caught, that was that—and the end of Herr Schlacht,' known to his brother officers as Car von Mittengen.

"Well, as soon as we knew all this, it became my business to put a spoke in his wheel—and I conceived the bright idea of doing not only that, but being the new wheel myself, if you understand me. One fine day it would be a case of 'Herr Schlacht is dead, long live Herr Schlacht!'

"I got in touch—very gentle touch, just like velvet—with the Senor Pedro Maligni—who was acting for the Kaid in Tangier—and in short, the Senor Pedro Maligni sold the Kaid and the German agent and the whole German connection, to me. He also agreed with me that the Kaid had had his day, and that it was time for so wise a man as Senor Pedro Maligni to put his money on another horse—rat from the sinking ship.

"For I was able to prove to him that France was able to sink the ship."

"Did my husband know anything of this?" interrupted Margaret.

"You want the truth, my dear?"

"Of course, the absolute truth."

"He was present at my final interview with his father. Jules Maligni was introduced to me by Pedro Maligni as his partner and agent. He was witness to our agreement and he helped me in my plans for intercepting poor von Mittengen."

"He knows, then," said Margaret, "that you are a French officer, and in the French secret service? He knows you are not Herr Schlacht?"

"He knows I am a French agent," replied Colonel Le Sage. "He knows the Herr Schlacht is dead and buried. It was he who was able to procure for me a mounted German photograph—from the mount of which I was able to remove the photograph and substitute my own above the name and address of the German photographer."

"What happened to the real Herr Schlacht, I mean?" asked Margaret.

"I killed him."

Margaret involuntarily drew away.

"Oh, I didn't murder him in cold blood, my dear. Curiously enough, I killed him in self-defence. As my little caravan approached his camp one evening, beside a water-hole in the Oued el Draa, he simply turned his men out and opened fire on us. I don't know whether he took us for Touareg from the Tanezruft, or whether he had his suspicions of the Senor Pedro Maligni. I know I had my suspicions of Maligni as soon as von Mittengen opened fire on us at sight, and wondered whether he were double double-crossing, and had warned von Mittengen to look out for me.

"Anyhow, it was, as I say, a case of self-defense—for we'd got to get to the water—though I don't say I wasn't glad of the excuse to go for him. So 'Herr Schlacht' died that day—and rose again that night, in the person of myself.

"And when I reached Mekazzen, the Malignis were there all ready to vouch for me—pass-word, photograph, and all."

"Filthy treachery," exclaimed Margaret in deep disgust and indignation.

"Yes, pretty bad. It might be argued, of course," continued Colonel Le Sage, "that I'm as bad as they are; the receiver as bad as the thief."

"Oh, no," expostulated Margaret. "You are working for France, working for good—not for your on personal profit, not making money by betraying the person who employs you, and trusts you."

Colonel Le Sage raised his huge hand and patted Margaret's shoulder.

"Thank you, my dear. And now let's consider the 'Emperor Riccoli" for just a moment."

(Copyright, 132, F. A. Stokes Co.)

And tomorrow the mystic pass-word "Yelverbury" again comes to Le Sage's ears.

Take it from our Mr. Orlo Robertson, who often gets up very early in the morning to join the railbirds, there's a horse named Repaid which will bear considerable watching in the Kentucky Derby this spring.

Repaid is owned by James F. Johnson, who claims to have lost $100,000 to Harry F. Sinclair in the famous Playfellow deal a number of years ago. The colt was bought by Johnson's Quincy stable for $1200 at a Sinclair dispersal sale and named with the idea he might help Mr. Johnson to "get even" with the one-time owner of the famous Rancocas stable.

If you don't recall the Playfellow deal, it concerned a horse by that name, sold by Johnson to Sinclair for $100,000. Later Sinclaim claimed Playfellow was a "windsucker," sued Johnson and won a verdict that cancelled the sale.

Favored By Turfmen

A bigger horse by 150 pounds than when he won the junior champion stakes last year, the son of Kai Sang looks every inch a champion, says Mr. Robertson. His knees bear the ugly scars of the firing irons, applied last fall as a precautionary measure, but otherwise he is as fine a looking thoroughbred as ever stepped a hoof on the American turf.

Quoted at 20 to 1 in the future books, Repaid is considered by many turfmen the horse to beat in the Derby. He won only one important race last year, the junior champion stakes, but he probably was the best horse in the Pimlico Futurity, finishing third after a long delay at the post, where he was kicked.

Precedent On His Side

If precedent means anything, the Johnson speedster should carry off the three-year old honors. Gallant Fox won the 1929 renewal of the Junior Chompion and then accounted for three-year old classics the following year. Twenty Grand took the Junior Champion in 1930 and was crowned the three-year old titleholder in 1932. Faireno came through in the 1931 running of the covered from a bad early season start to be recognized as the leading three-year old.

Repaid is bred for distince. If all goes well the colt will get his trials for the Derby in two races, either at Have de Grace, Lexington or on a New York track, if the metropolitan season opens early enough Trainer Edde Phelan says he will have Repaid ready for the races early in April.

Most baseball fans remember that Eddie Collins first wied out with the Athletics under the alias of "Eddie Sullivan," while still an undergraduate at Columbia university, but few know this wasn't the reason the new general manager of the Red Sox was barred from collegiate competition in his senior year and asked, instead, to coach the team.

Our authority for this bit of ancient history is Jack Coffey, Fordham's graduate manager, who was a collegiate contemporary of Collins and enjoyed a checkered professional baseball career for years before he took over his present post with the Maroon in 1924.

"Collins played under his own name in a little league in up-state New York before he caught the eye of big league scouts and was given a tryout with the A's," said Coffey. "He didn't think anything of it at the time but when the question of his eligibility arose, this was the reason they barred him. The fact he had played big league ball under another name was all O. K.

Wasn't Zimm's Fault

"Heinie Zimmerman played on the same team with Collins in those days," recalled Coffey. "It was a coincidence that years later, in 1917, they were on opposite sides in the world series, in one game of which Heinie chased Eddie across the plate, trying to tag him.

"It was a foolish play, of course, and Zimmerman always was charged with one of the biggest 'bones' in baseball but it wasn't entirely his fault. Riorden, catching for the Giants, had advanced up the third base line during the play, leaving the plate unprotected. Holke, the first baseman, also failed to cover and when Collins broke away, pursued by Zimmerman, there was no one to whom Heinie could throw the ball."

John Francis Coffey served three big league teams as an infielder, playing with both Boston clubs as well as Detroit, but his light stick-work kept him in the minors most of the time. He claims to hold a record of having played on about 55 clubs in around 18 different leagues during a period of 16 years.

A's Cut Overhead

By one means or another, the Philadelphia Athletics probably have reduced their 1933 payroll to a bigger extent than any other major league ball club.

There is no doubt Connie Mack has experienced some pangs of regret, but it also is a fact that the overhead of the A's has been cut from $75,000 to $100,000 by the departure of players Simmons, Haas and Dykes as well as Captain Collins. These four all were among the highest paid, for their positions, in the league.

Mack publicly admitted Dykes was the biggest salaried third sacker in the majors and it is known Simmons has a year to go on a three-year $100,000 contract.

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood.—When major studios release features that are more or less alike in theme what is known as a "cycle" in films is born.

But if two studios making two-reel comedies release virtually the same picture the coincidence is likely to be called plagiarism.

It was Ernest Pagano, Educational's scenario chief, who pointed out this difference the other day, explaining why two reelers don't come in cycles.

Getting There First

"We beat everybody to the technocracy idea, in making 'Technocrazy,'" he said. "We also had in mind a comedy on women's wearing of men's clothes—to tie in with the Marlene Dietrich fad—but Bryan Foy filed the title, 'She Wears the Pants,' first; so we're dropping it."

Current events, so popular as feature subjects, don't rate so highly in the slapstick plants. Topics of the day lend themselves readily to dramatic treatment, but many people see no humor in them, according to Pagano.

Pagano doesn't like slapstick himself, but admits it gets laughs where subtler comedy fails. "Slapstick with a reason is all right," he says "but meaningless falls and blows are—meaningless."

Cycles in features, by the way, have come in for much recent attention. First M. C. Levee, with other remarks on the sad state of the industry, labeled "cycles" the producers' "feeble alibi for their practice of copying each others' ideas."

Newspaper-Like

Then Jack Warner, production chief of the studio that all but specializes in topical features, announce his organization would continue to "anticipate trends and cycles" through use of the "reportorial system" of screen writing.

In other words, it will send out screen writers as "reporters" on unusual situations to bring back their data and concoct screen fare therefrom. Two features already have been produced in this manner.

The "reporter," it seems, submits his facts to a screen "city editor" and "rewrite men" for working into screen play form.

In another sense, the "rewrite man" has been responsible for a great many of the screen's "cycles"—just as Ernie Pagano pointed out. Only in the world of features they call it a "cycle," and not plagiarism.

Hollywood—Fast-talking, dynamic Lee Tracy would like to slow his pace.

He fears it is "the pace that kills"—or at least ultimately may kill Tracy at the box-office. Understandably, he wants to do something about it.

When Lee, who is a smart boy, came back to Hollywood for a second fling at pictures, his success in "Blessed Event" made producers scramble for him. There followed, in a one-year period, nine pictures in which Lee talked fast, moved fast, and generally was the high-powered high pressure hero.

"If I keep that up," he says, "it'll be no time at all before they get sick of me. Nine pictures in a year is a lot."

He Wants Variety

Before "The Front Page" Tracy hadn't been identified especially with rapid conversation, and he hopes to vary his screen roles in the future.

When I talked to him he was working on "The Chaser," in which he has what movie people call "a typical Tracy part." His sentiment was that one more wouldn't hurt, and besides—"now's no time to talk about a change in type. It's the future I'm thinking of," he said.

Funny how a "reputation" sticks to an actor. When studios were asking employes to take that 50 per cent salary cut it was no time at all before the story started that Lee Tracy, who in his year out here several times has been at odds with studios, had balked with emphasis.

The same story got around on was a "walk-out" from contract. James Cagney, who not long ago Both signed up, no more eagerly and no more hesitantly than any of the other stars who signed agreements.

More Fun!

Meanwhile, aside from the more serious aspects of the current Hollywood situation, there's quite a bit of fun—in some quarters. Sure, it may be just the comedy mask, but everybody agrees Hollywood needs that particular "prop" at the moment.

Home games like anagrams, jigsaw puzzles, bridge, and even taffy-pulls have been supplanting night clubs and shows for the temporarily cashless among the younger stars, who make a game of their predicament.

Some "home parties" even have featured hearts, checkers and cribbage, amusements seldom pursued in the "smarter gatherings" of normal days.

Jack Oakie put on a home talent vaudeville show—and you should have seen the cut-ups!

JOE SAVOLDI TO CONTEND FOR EUROPEAN MAT TITLE

Los Angeles (AP)—When "Jumping" Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame university fullback and now a professional wrestler, goes to Italy this summer with a team of football players to introduce American football in that country, he also intends to compete for the European heavyweight mat title, he says.

Savoldi says Premier Benito Mussolini extended him an invitation a few months ago to bring a team of gridiron stars to Italy.

ILLUSION:

The magician exhibits a flower pot with hinged sides on a table in the center of the stage. He opens out the sides to show that this container is empty. Closing it up, he places a screen between it and the audience. After a short period of magic incantations he removes the screen. The astounded audience sees a beautiful girl, covered to the shoulders in lovely flowers, rising from the "empty" container. Where did she come from?

EXPLANATION:

The girl was hiding behind the drape of the table. There is a trap door in the bottom of the flower pot, with a hole large enough to allow her to crawl through. The flowers, called "magicians' feather flowers," are a regular part of a magician's outfit. The flower girl wears a rubber tunic and a bathing cap to keep the flowers compressed into small space. She slides the tunic down and the flowers expand when she emerges.

A trick frequently worked in cigarette advertising is the illusion that mildness in a cigarette comes from mysterious processes of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes today are made in modern sanitary factories with up-to-date machinery. All are heat treated—some more intensively than others, because raw, inferior tobaccos require more intensive treatment than choice, ripe tobaccos.

The real difference comes in the tobaccos that are used. The better the tobacco, the milder it is.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

That is why Camels are so mild. That is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

It's the secret of Camels' rich "bouquet"...their cool flavor...their non-irritating mildness.

Give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction of the more expensive tobaccos.

CAGE SEASON ENDS TONIGHT

Wings Meet Sphas In Closing Tilt; Two Preliminary Games Are Booked.

Basketball will make its final bow locally tonight when the Philadelphia Spas, crack team of the Eastern professional league, meet the Gettysburg Fleet-Wings on the Hotel Gettysburg annex floor.

An elaborate evening's program of basketball has been scheduled for the windup attraction. Beginning at 7 o'clock, the Blue Streaks, Gettysburg's independent girls' team, meet the Emmitsburg Snappy Six. Following this tilt the state highway battles the Hanover Y. M. C. A. and immediately following this fray the Sphas and Wings clash.

Beating the Sphas is no mean task for the best professional cage teams in the country but the Wings feel they are capable of doing the trick and will be out to upset the invaders.

The visitors will have their regular lineup intact, having guaranteed that Litwack, Foreman, Fitch, Passon, Wolfe and Kaselman will be present.

While each Spha player is a veteran of well-known court ability, probably the best known is Cy Kaselman, heralded as the greatest foul shot in the game today and leading scorer of the Eastern league.

Kaselman plays a guard position and local fans will get a chance to compare him with Fat Jenkins of the Renaissance and Nat Hickey of the Celtics, other crack guards who have appeared here this season. Stopping the great Cy will be one of the tasks for the Wings if they are to finish their season with a victory.

The Wings will have their full lineup on hand with Reilly, Hen Bream, G. Bream, Albright, Buohl, Raff, Seely, Buehler and Jones.

WINGS BOW TO HANOVER 37-36

Stout Defense Work Holds Local Forwards To Two Points, Saturday Night.

Failing to display their usual brand of ball, the Gettysburg Fleet-Wings dropped a 37-36 decision to the Hanover All-Stars at Hanover, Saturday night.

Stellar defensive work by Witmer and Geiselman, who blanked Seely and Raff, Wing guards, without a single field goal and limited the pair to two points between them, featured the contest.

Bill Kintzing, former Hanover high star, and Hugh Hoke, ex-Gettysburg college court ace, carried off the scoring honors for the victors with twelve points apiece.

Yockey Bream was the only Wing player who was able to puncture the enemy defense, netting seven field goals and four fouls in as many heaves. "Hen" Bream was second high, with seven tallies.

Hanover assumed the lead early in the contest and although never headed, was forced to the limit by the locals. At half time Hanover held a commanding 17-8 lead.

Sunday Sports Bill Revival Planned in Senate Tonight

Harrisburg, March 20 (AP).—A hale and hearty 109-year-old veteran, with a legendary ability to "take it," the Pennsylvania blue law squares off today to face another challenge.

Target for innumerable legislative jabs, the 1794 statute will meet an assault designed to break down the ban on Sunday sports.

The fifty state senators left the capital last week believing they had disposed of the blue law question, only to find that the somewhat groggy attacking forces had come back into the general assembly ring for another try.

Senator McClure, of Delaware County, organization republican leader, is responsible for the return of this question. Six hours after the close of last week's sessions he announced that he would ask the senate tomorrow night to reconsider its defeat of the Schwartz Sunday sports bill.

When the senate convenes, McClure, who was one of twenty-six senators voting against the measure, plans to move for reconsideration. If his move succeeds, he will offer an amendment to provide for statewide and local referenda on the question of liberalizing the Sunday observance laws.

Two Referenda Proposed

Under McClure's proposed amendment the two referenda would be held simultaneously in connection with the municipal election next November. Under one measure, if the state-wide vote favors liberalization, the statutes automatically would be amended to permit baseball and football on Sundays. If it is opposed to change, the statutes would remain in their present form.

The local referenda would be effective only in case the state-wide referendum favors liberalization. In that event the local vote would determine whether Sunday restrictions would be lifted in that community or whether it would remain closed to Sunday baseball and football.

If McClure's amendment is accepted by the senate, the Schwartz bill as amended will be voted on finally on Tuesday. If McClure is the only senator who votes negatively to change his vote, Lieutenant Governor E. C. Shannon would be forced to cast the deciding ballot, as the vote of the fifty senators would be evenly divided.

THREE FLIERS DIE IN CRASH

Lieut. J. A. Willis, His Father And Another Passenger Fall In Plane.

Washington, March 20 (AP)—Lieutenant James A. Willis and his two passengers, Major James A. Willis, his father, and Major John A. Parker, were killed late Sunday when the army transport plane in which they were flying crashed near Petersburg, Virginia.

The report was received here from Bolling field and the three men identified after army officials at the airport had been notified by Virginia state police. Bolling field officials said Willis was flying in a fog toward Washington from Pope field, Fayetteville, North Carolina.

Both Major Willis and Major Parker were connected with the judge advocate general's department.

Officials here were unimformed of the cause of the crash.

The plane was a C-19 single engine, five-pasenger transport. Lieutenant Willis had been flying in the army service here about four years. The party had flown to the North Carolina field last Friday.

Lieutenant Willis was not married. The widow of the elder Willis and their daughter, Margaret, reside in Washington, as does the widow of Major Parker.

Major Parker, 55, was a native of Charlotte, North Carolina, and was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1906. During the war he was connected with the judge advocate general's office overseas and had since been stationed in Washington and for a while in Panama.

Major Willis was a native of Harnett county, North Carolina, and was born near Lillington. He also was 55.

Lieutenant Willis was 30 and was a native of South Carolina. He was a graduate of primary and advanced flying school and was a rated air pilot.

BRITONS AGREE ON PEACE PLAN

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald And Aides Like "Mussolini Plan."

Rome, March 20 (AP)—A "Mussolini plan" to assure an area of world peace was studied in conferences of the Italian premier with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain and his foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, over the week-end, an official communique said Sunday.

Premier MacDonald and Sir John, who had gone to Geneva to break a stalemate in the world disarmament conference, came to Rome Saturday for conferences with Premier Mussolini. While at Geneva Mr. MacDonald offered a new plan for disarmament.

Britons Leave Rome

The "Musolini plan" is based on collaboration of the four European powers—France, Germany, England and Italy. It is described as founded on the spirit of the Kellogg treaty and as an international agreement to outlaw war.

The communique said the British statesmen would leave Rome today, going home by way of Paris, where they will submit the project to the French government.

The official statement said:

"After a full and exhaustive exchange of ideas on the general situation, the ministers examined in these conversations a project for an understanding on larger political questions put forward by the head of the Italian government, with the object of securing collaboration of the four western powers in an effort to promote, in the spirit of the Kellogg pact and a 'no-force' declaration, a long period of peace for Europe and the world.

"The British ministers, leaving Rome today for London, will break the journey at Paris, where they will have an opportunity of meeting the members of the French government."

12 CAGE STARS GIVEN LETTERS

8 Wrestlers Win Coveted 'G'; 16-game Baseball Schedule Is Announced.

Twelve members of the Gettysburg college championship basketball team received letters, awarded by the athletic council, Saturday afternoon. Nine members of the freshmen team received numerals. Eight wrestlers received the coveted "G" and three were awarded numerals.

C. E. Bilheimer, athletic director at the college, announced four track meetings and sixteen game baseball schedule for this spring. Only one track meet is scheduled for the home lot, Johns Hopkins coming here on April 22. This meet will precede a baseball game at 3:30 o'clock.

Six home games are booked for the baseballers.

For the first time in three years the Bullets will play on Memorial Day, Villanova coming here to face the Orange and Blue.

The athletic council awards and the track and baseball schedules follow:

Basketball lettermen: Captain Jones, Dracha, Kosma, Kutzmiller, Flynn, Howard, Olkewicz, McMillen, Maust, Eby, Enders and Armento.

Freshman numerals: Thomas, McCahan, Coble, Snyder, Jackson, Cice, Sobelesky, Morris, Work.

Wrestling letters: Nowicki, Karns, Kline, Plack, Dunbar, Hough, Messenger, Coyne. Numerals: Etzler, Leber, Larson.

Basketball managers for 1933-34: M. D. Rudisill, J. N. B. Livingood, C. N. Kulman, O. W. Hartman. Wrestling managers, R. A. Peterman, L. S. Barr.

Track schedule: April 22, Johns Hopkins here; May 5, Dickinson, at Carlisle; May 13, Middle Atlantics at Lancaster; May 20, Central Pennsylvania conference meet, at Carlisle.

Baseball schedule: April 22, Drexel, here; April 25, Lebanon Valley, at Annville; April 28, Bucknell, here; May 3, Navy, at Annapolis; May 5, Villanova, at Villanova; May 6, Swarthmore, at Philadelphia; May 10, Mt. St. Mary's, here; May 13, Ursinus, here; May 19, Juniata at Huntington; May 20, Penn State at State; May 27, Alumni at Reading; May 29, Mt. St. Mary's, at Emmitsburg; May 30, Villanova, here, June 10, morning game, Dickinson, here; June 10, afternoon game, Dickinson, at Carlisle. D. E. Enders is captain of the baseball team. R. S. Gifford is captain of the track team.

The tennis schedule will be announced later.

County Pastor Resigns Charge

The resignation of the Rev. Walter D. Guss as pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, of McSherrystown, was read by him to the congregation at the morning worship Sunday. He will complete seven years of pastoral duties on Easter. The resignation becomes effective on April 15.

The resignation was tendered to enable him to accept a unanimous call from the congregation of St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran church of Chester Springs, nine miles from Phoenixville.

Although the official board of the church met after the service, no action was taken on the resignation. Action will be taken at a congregational meeting to be held Sunday morning, April 2.

The Rev. Mr. Guss was graduated from Gettysburg college, class of 1922, and from the Philadelphia seminary, class of 1925.

CHOPS UP WIFE, THEN SUICIDES

Cincinnati Butcher Slashes Throat While Battling With Police.

Cincinnati, March 20 (AP)—The body of a woman, chopped into fourteen pieces, was discovered in an automobile here Sunday and shortly afterward her husband committed suicide after battling officers.

Police said the couple was identified as Charles D. Evans, 50, a butcher, and Ellen J. Evans, 42, of Indianapolis.

Police found a note from an attorney instructing Evans to pay his wife $25 alimony every two weeks. When asked whether he killed the woman, Evans replied affirmatively, adding, "She tried to shoot me."

Find Remains In His Car

The woman's body was discovered when police stopped Evans because his automobile bore a 1932 license plate. He became nervous and thinking he might be a liquor runner, Officer Joyce lifted a tarpaulin in the back of the car. Under it were a wash boiler and numerous cooking utensils.

Two other officers came up as Joyce lifted the lid of one of the utensils and felt flesh inside.

"What is this?" asked Joyce.

"A ham," Evans replied. "I killed a hog."

"Where is your wife?" the officer persisted.

"In Indianapolis," came the reply and then the butcher drew from his pocket a safety razor blade, cut his wrist and began slashing at his throat.

Battles Police, Slashes Throat

Two of the officers shot at his arm, trying to stop him. The battle grew worse, with Evans, a powerful 235-pound man, holding the officers off with one hand and slashing at his throat with the other.

A large crowd gathered as the battle continued. Finally the officers began pleading with Evans to desist in his efforts to commit suicide.

Evans replied by offering them a roll of bills, $152, saying "give this to my mother."

Then he drew back and drove the razor blade into his jugular vein. He sank to the ground and died almost immediately.

INITIATE 250 INTO RED MEN

Many Gettysburg Members In Attendance At Harrisburg Affair Saturday.

Two mass meetings under the direction of the Improved Order of Red Men and its woman's branch the Degree of Pocahontas, were held in the state farm show building Harrisburg, Saturday. They were attended by almost 5,000 persons committee members said. Many from Gettysburg were in attendance.

A public demonstration was held by the Red Men Saturday night, at which time 250 candidates were initiated. Seventy-six of these were contributed by Cornplanter Tribe of Harrisburg. Fifty-six tribes of Red Men from Dauphin, Cumberland, Adams, York, Lancaster, Blair, Northumberland, Lycoming, Schuylkill, Berks and Lebanon counties furnished the candidates in connection with a membership drive. Wyanet tribe, Reading, conferred the degree work.

Every seat in the show building auditorium was filled. Almost 4,000 persons attended. Addresses were made by Great Incohonee Worthington P. Wachter, Hagerstown, Maryland, the national head of the Red Men; Great Senior Sagamore Arthur J. Ruland, Binghamton, New York; Great Junior Sagamore Harvey O. Burnett, Harrisburg, Great Pocahontas Viola J. Snoddy Harrisburg, and Great Minnehaha Effie M. Samsel, Steelton, of the Degree of Pocahontas; Great Sachem Blake B. Shugart, Clearfield, assemblyman from Clearfield county, and Harry W. Beard, a past sachem of Cornplanter tribe, who was in charge of arrangements for the meeting.

Other Officials

Among other Red Men officials present were: Senior Sagamore Robzert H. Jackson and Great Prophet Louis T. Seeger, both of Philadelphia, and Great Junior Sagamore Arthur W. Buesch, Allentown.

A twenty-piece orchestra and three xylophone players accompanied the Reading Red Men and furnished the music. A pageant "The Making of the American Flag," was given by a cast of sixty-five persons.

A reception was given by the Degree of Pocahontas in the afternoon to the visiting Red Men and Degree of Pocahontas officers. Among the guests of honor was Great Junior Sagamore Harvey O. Burtnett, of Harrisburg. Sixteen councils of the Degree of Pocahontas from York, Adams, Lebanon, Cumberland and Dauphin counties were represented.

Seven hundred and fifty members of the Degree of Pocahontas from the five counties attended. A class of 160 candidates was initiated by Swatara council degree team of Steelton.

Shall All Denominations Unite And Form One?

That all churches should federate on the basis of "Scriptural Union," or that there should be but one body of believers in Jesus, as in the beginning, is altogether clear. Of all things, it is most desirable. Unity in the children of God has been the idea of the ages; upon this principle Jesus built but one church. He said "upon this rock I will build my church," not churches. Christ always spoke of the church in the singular, never in the plural, and his purpose was that the church should maintain its unity. He agonized and prayed, John 17, that the disciples might be one, even as He and the Father are one, that they may be made perfect in one. The unity of the Godhead is the ideal of church unity, and Jesus prayed that it might be maintained throughout the ages. The teaching of the Bible is that church divisions are wrong. In a letter from an editor of a secular paper, he asked us if church divisions were wrong. We informed him that to ask such a question concerning that which is so plainly condemned by the word of God seems superfluous. But as contentions which form the basis of divisions crept into the church in Paul's day and have since continued to the present time, may we, in some way, find common grounds on which to meet these conditions and over 600 different sects, and turn them into some useful channel by which the awful consequences may be avoided. Christ's command is to have no divisions among you. I Cor. 1:10.

Having been asked by an editor if "Church divisions are wrong," we will say to the learned editor that the greatest disadvantage of these hundreds of divisions is that they have furnished the world with a powerful argument against Christianity. Every person knows that Christ commanded "Unity" and that all who profess to serve the same master. So the infidel and atheist ask, "If you are Christians, why are you divided?" and men point the finger of scorn at these church members separated into a hundred rival sects which are many times hostile camps making as much war upon one another as they do against sin.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Reigle.

Time speeds on; sixteen years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.

We miss that light and ever will,
Their vacant place there is none to fill.
Down here we mourn but not in vain,
For up in heaven we hope to meet again.

By their daughters,
ANNIE and IDA.

Reports Better Auto Equipment

An improvement in the general condition of motor vehicle safety equipment in Pennsylvania is noted by the division of safety, department of revenue. The finding is based on an analysis of official inspection station reports on motor vehicles inspected in the first weeks of the two 1932 campaigns and in the first weeks of the present campaign.

Only 20 per cent of the vehicles inspected in the first week of the first 1932 campaign were approved as not needing repairs. In the first week of the second campaign of that year, the percentage of mechanically fit vehicles had risen to 27 per cent. In the first week of the present campaign 30 uer cent were approved without corrections. These percentages are cited by the division as evidence that the inspection campaigns are having an increasingly good effect on motor vehicle safety equipment.

Straight Lines Mold the New Spring-wear Silhouette

By Rita Ferris
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

Paris (AP)—Fashion's silhouette for 1933 has taken on new lines. The general line is straightened. Skirts are longer. The waistline is coming down.

Spring clothes designed for the Easter parades on Fifth avenue and Main street are fashioned on an easy fitting silhouette giving a straighter effect than last season and no longer hugging the waistline. Sleeves are generally fairly plain, although their lengths vary from a five-eighths cut to three-quarter length bells.

Daytime skirts are decidedly longer in many prominent houses, varying from six to 10 inches from the ground. Evening skirts often touch the floor.

The waistline—point of great controversy last season—is placed at the natural line or lowered to a point a few inches below, depending upon the figure.

Coat Lengths Vary

Spring coats are an interesting item of news in themselves. They may be either three-quarter or full length; they fit the figure very slightly at the waistline and they almost never button. Some hang open, others are held in place by a belt, and a third group is fastened by means of a little scarf. Few of them are furred.

The frocks which accompany them offer a score of varied designs ranging all the way from frivolous short-sleeved models to long-sleeved ones. Plain colored crepes, floral prints, stripes, checks and polka dots are all seen. Bodices show more trimming than last season, while skirts display a tendency to pleats. Flat and diagonal wools, pebbled crepes, prints, stripes and checks are favorite daytime fabrics.

Color is one of the most important items in style news. Coats no longer match frocks in the old ensemble idea, but are linked to the complicated color scheme by means of scarfs, hats, belts and gloves.

Accessories Important

Accessories are more important than ever. Gloves of every conceivable fabric in every conceivable color, novelty bags and tricky belts of straw or wire are the order of the day. Bright accessories with a dull colored frock are the general rule.

Hats are varied in design. The little flat crowned sailor is a favorite, while a new tall toque, sometimes seven inches high, made of straw or silk crepe is the headgear sensation of the hour.

BRAZIL PRODUCES SILK

Campinas, Sao Paulo, Brazil (AP) Silk culture has increased 60-fold in this new industrial region north of Sao Paulo city say state government statistics. The area had 250,000 mulberry trees in 1924 and now has more than 15,000,000. Most of the silk goes into stockings.

Household Hints

To Whiten Clothes

Clothes which have become yellowed can be whitened by sprinkling with water and spreading on the grass in the sun. Articles slightly discolored can be soaked in cold water and then boiled until white.

Don't Threaten Child With Doctor's Visit

Never tell an unruly child that you will call the doctor for him, or imply in any way that a doctor's visit is something terrifying and painful.

Sometime the doctor will have to come, and the child to whom he has been made a bogie-man will be a most difficult and unhappy patient.

Basket And Easter Egg Good For Child's Favor

Inexpensive favors for a children's Easter party can be in the form of a little basket for each in which they will find a present of a small Easter egg wrapped in crinkly paper of the color scheme which is to predominate at the party. The baskets can be embellished by ribbons.

Driend And Canned Fruits Money Savers In North

Washington (AP). — Dried and canned fruits are money-savers in northern climates, says the bureau of home economics. Prunes and apricots may be used without cooking if put to soak in hot water and left until plump and tender. Dried peaches are best if cooked.

Slip Straps Slipping? Do This And They Won't

A piece of ribbon sewed inside the tops of the shoulders of your dress, with a snap at the other end of the ribbon and a snap sewed in the dress so that you can keep the strap of your slip from sliding down your arms takes but a short time to devise and gives you great comfort.

Left-over spiced pickle juice or the juices left from bottled pickles is excellent to use poured over whole or sliced ham when baking. It may also be used to thin salad dressings.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Union.—The following is the splendid close of Mr. Webster's speech on Foot's resolution—every American heart must respond to the fine tone of sentiment it breathes:—"When my eyes shall be turned to behold for the last time the sun in heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union; on States disserved, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds; or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood! Let their last feeble and lingering glance rather behold the gorgeous Ensign of the Republic now known and honored throughout the world; its arms and trophies streaming in their original luster, not a stripe erased or polluted, nor a single star obscured—bearing for its motto not such miserable interrogatory as "What is all this worth-' nor those other words of delusion and folly 'Liberty first and Union afterwards,'—but everywhere spread all over in characters of living light, blazing on all its ample folds, as they float over the sea and the land, and in every wind under the whole Heavens, that other sentiment, dear to every American heart—'Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.'"

Cape de Verd Islands.—Collections of money have been taken up in this borough during the last day or two for the purpose of furnishing provisions for the distressed inhabitants of the Cape de Verdo. The fund now amounts to about fifty dollars. Any additional contributions for this charitable purpose left at the drug store of Mr. Buehler within a day or two, will be forwarded with that already collected.

Foreign News.—By an arrival at New York, London papers of the evening of the 19th, Jan. have been received.

The king of Holland has opened the Scheldt to the flags of all nations—those of Great Britain, France and Belgium excepted.

Mount Vesuvius was in a violent commotion, continued explosions were heard in Naples.

A large reduction of the French army is expected. 100,000 infantry and 26,000 cavalry.

The king of Spain has associated with him his wife in the government of the kingdom—which was in a state of tranquillity.

A society composed of nearly one hundred families of newly arrived Germans, have made a selection of a tract of 14,000 acres of land, situated on the west branch of the Susquehanna, in the counties of Lycoming and Center, whereon to make a settlement. They are regularly organized as a society which they call "Concordia," and have a constitution and laws for their internal government. The lands belong to the city of Philadelphia, to the proper authorities of which, the society have applied for their purchase. They offer two dollars per acre for the whole tract.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest: as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken.

The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly.

The vile person shall be no more called liberal, nor the churl said to be bountiful.

For the vile person shall speak villainy, and his heart will work iniquity, to practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the Lord to make empty the soul of the hungry; and he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.

The instruments also of the churl are evil: he deviseth wicked devices to destroy the poor with lying words, even when the needy speaketh right.

But the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand.—Isaiah 32:1-8.

Just Folks

by EDGAR A. GUEST

MEXICO CITY CLIMATE

If you're up to greet the morning
There's a touch of early May,
With winter on the mountain peaks
Not many miles away.

It's summer when it's noon-time
With her blue skies overhead
And a wealth of blossoms swaying
In the humblest garden bed.

And when it comes to evening—
Strangest miracle of all!—
There's the harvest moon above you
And the crispness of the fall.

Thus winter, spring and summer
And autumn's splendor may Be lived within the space of
Just an ordinary day.

EXPLAINING THE CAUSE

'Twas not the pitching of the ship
that made me ill-at-ease,
'Twas not the howling wind which blew; 'twas not the angry seas,
'Twas not the blackness of the sky
that lowered overhead,
Nor things which flew across the deck which sent me back to bed;
'Twas that unusual fellow-man, that nerveless, healthy type,
Who came and sat 'long side o' me and calmly smoked his pipe.

The ship was weathering the gale and so I thought was I.
Upon the Gulf of Mexico the waves ran mountain high,
But I was doing rather well and not the least upset;
Though breakfast was a meal, of course, I wished I "hadn't et."
However, I was on my feet and thought the storm a joke
Until that fellow filled his pipe and started in to smoke.

I'll sail the seas with any man, if only he'll behave.
I little mind the winds that blow;
I like the bounding wave,
And I'd have stayed on deck all day
without a trace of fear
Had not a man from Dayton
munched an apple in my ear.
I'll take my oath for wind and wave
I didn't care a whoop,
But seemed to lose my appetite when the steward passed the soup.

And now I'm safely back on shore where things don't roll about
And there are growing trees to see whenever I look out.
I have my appetite again, the smell of soup seems good,
And I can laugh with hearty zest,
but I want it understood
I wasn't sea-sick on the trip; the thing that made me choke
Was just a man who filled his pipe and started in to smoke.

PRIVATE MINT IN CHINA FAKES AUSTRALIAN CONIS

Sydney (AP)—Detectives are trying to locate a mint in China which is producing large quantities of almost perfect counterfeits of Australian silver coins.

Three Chinese who were found with counterfeit coins have been deported, but anxiety has been increased by the fact that the police in giving evidence against them revealed the correct formula used in Australia's coins. With this knowledge the pirate mint can produce perfect money.

A dollar's worth of Australian coins can be made from 15 cents' worth of silver.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE GOOD EARTH

RECENTLY I took my car and set out to go "somewhere"—but primarily to treat my mind and body to the medicine of the out-of-doors. There is nothing so directly "medicinal" as to get close to the earth and get its whisperings.

Everywhere I have seen land, land, land—and yet so much that lies idle and unproductive.

On the other side of the world a nation is fighting for just this sort of land that its crowded people may have room and the opportunity to make productive that which lies all too dormant under the sun. Yet over there, in Canada and the United States, we have more land than can be used to advantage right now.

The fact is that there is enough land, unused, to feed and care for every idle man on this Continent! Ever since I was a boy there has been a steady leaving of the farms for the city. Perhaps, as we get back to the ideals of our fathers, we shall be able to live off the earth as they did.

Mr. Henry Ford is testing this idea out in a section of Michigan about 50 miles from his home, so that what he says about land is well worth considering. He believes that this complicated age of the machine and mass production must be somehow balanced by the efficient handling of the millions of idle acres of land now so useless, and which are being allowed to sleep.

From a most desolate looking country, the other day, I suddenly came upon a great extent of land under beautiful cultivation. I said to myself that that farmer was a man of great enterprise and vision—but I soon learned that the "farmer" was the state through which I was passing! An Experimental Station.

It is about time that the tillers of the soil got a "break"—and perhaps, with our awakened sense and renewed vision we shall see this very thing.

There is so much that the land can do for us that we have failed, up to now, to see. There is no calling in the world more honorable and useful than that of farmer.

King Of Bird Dogs Points 11 Bevies In Three Hours

Grand Junction, Tenn. (AP).—The new king of the nation's bird dogs is a 4-year-old pointer, gifted with brains, speed, stamina and an uncommon nose.

Running high, wide and handsome, Rapid Transit, owned by A. G. C. Sage, of New York, outclassed all competition at the National Field trials at Grand Junction, Tennessee, to win the national title by the unanimous decision of the judges.

Competing in a field comprising the best the bird dog breeders have to offer, the comparative youngster, packing 50 pounds of bone and muscle, made 11 finds in a three-hour heat, ten of them independent locations.

Untiring, this sturdy son of The Hottentot and Milligan's Jane, made his eleventh point as time was called. He made his last three finds in the final thirty minutes of his heat.

Because his brace mate in his three-hour trial did not offer sufficient competition, Rapid Transit's ability to back was not put to a test until the last day.

He and his kennel mate, nine-year-old Superlette, were put down for more than an hour's activity during which each found two bevies.

Suddenly, in front of the judges and gallery, he saw Superlette on a point, and froze himself—backing to honor her stand.

There was no longer any indecision. The judges declared Rapid Transit the best bird dog of the year.

Brilliance Reigns In Paris Fabrics; New Color Combinations Are Shown

By Rita Ferris,
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

Paris (AP).—More brilliant surfaces are the rule in many new fabrics making this spring's togs.

The dull crepes in vogue last year are being tossed aside, fabric designers say, and brilliant satins and crepes are taking their places. Even wools reflect the vogue for more brilliant surfaces since many of them are interwoven with white hairs, which give a frosty finish.

Cotton And Flax Popular

Cotton and flax weaves are everywhere. They are woven in heavy designs to resemble wool and smooth satiny finishes to resemble silk.

Wools designed by Rodier for those first spring coats and frocks show new weaves and color combinations. They are woven with a surface often threaded with rabbit hairs to give a soft finish and occasionally splashed with white hairs for frosty effect. Djalap (a firm wool woven with rabbit hairs), plumilap (a creepy wool woven with rabbit hairs) and djabura (a heavy wool splashed with white hairs) are among the outstanding.

Fewer Reds, Blues, Green

Fewer pure reds, blues or greens are seen. Many fabrics are woven in two colors or two shades of one color, which give hues providing a whole new color scale. Djalaps are woven in emerald and billiard green, mustard and cocoa, light rose and deep rose, while djaburas meld such unusual combinations as light blue and brown, red and deep blue, black and yellow in flat weaves unmarked by stripes or plaids.

Satins, of both natural and artificial silk, in such pastel tones as pale blue, pale pink, yellow, ivory and mauve, are shown as outstanding favrics for evening wear.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York. — Waite Hoyt, the Brooklynite who has signed to pitch for the Pittsburgh Pirates, tells of what he believed to be a unique discovery in radio circles.

Hoyt and Will Osborne, crooning orchestra leader, were at the home of Harry Romm, the artists' manager, when Osborne produced some recordings by "Bing" Crosby—you know, one of the other crooners.

Osborne played the records on Romm's machine and sat enraptured, now and then commenting on "how wonderful" he thought the Crosby technique.

"I've heard baseall players speak complimentary words of other baseball players," says Hoyt, "but never before have I heard—or even heard of—one radio crooner going into raves over another."

Maybe you'd be just as happy not knowing about such things.

It's "Leontovich"

Eugenie Leontovich, the dancer of "Grand Hotel" on the stage, now is showing Broadway that she can be every bit as effective in comedy as she was in that tragic role. There wasn't any humor in that part.

Now she gives us an acidulous burlesque of a faking stage and cinema siren, very arty and temperamental, in the play evolved by Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur and Charles Bruce Millholland.

Probaly a good many people have wondered what sort of person Leontovich is off-stage. Well, all those who have come in contact with her here in New York have found her gracious, extraordinarily modest and lacking in temperamental fireworks.

The other night she extended an invitation to visit her back-stage. Something came up about her name, which is seen spelled "Leontovitch" about as often as "Leontovich."

"Really, it doesn't make the slightest difference," she said. "I never boiher about that at all."

But, when she spells it, she spells it without the final "t."

So let it be—Leontovich.

Incidentally, her return to Hollywood to make a picture is indefinitely postponed. She was just about ready to buy her ticket before the chance came to play in "20th Century."

What's $15?

Borrah Minevitch, called "the Monarch of the Mouth-Organ," took his "Harmonica Rascals" on to the stage of Rovy's new picture house—the "little theatre" in Radio City—for a week's pay said to run over a couple of thousand.

Whatever the figure, Minevitch and his Rascals have dragged down thousands and thousands of dollars on different stages. And I like to recall the frank admission of Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld that some years ago, when he was musical director at the Rialto, he fired Borrah, then an obscure harmonica player, because he asked for a raise of from $35 to $50 a week!

It's funny how things happen. The Rialto was a Roxy theatre in those days.

Amusing, too, is the way some of these tough, usually irreverent taxi drivers can go softie over a pretty actress whom they recognize in their cabs.

We caught a cab on Sixth avenue the other afternoon and the driver was so ga-ga he just had to get it off his chest:

"I just hauled Lupe Velez to her hotel. Yeah, shame to take money from a dame like dat."

New York—There has been a great deal of talk about the 6,200-seat music hall in Rockefeller Center some day blossoming out as the new home of Metropolitan opera.

Although business picked up for the music hall after the inaugural Roxy extravaganza died away and a policy of films supplemented by stage shows took effect, the talk about the opera persists.

Opera is in the doldrums, and one of the suggested panaceas is a movement to win wider public interest by more democratic presentation.

If that can be accomplished, the music hall, as it stands, probably would be a fine home for opera. In patterning the huge hall, S. L. Rothafel omitted most of the architectural features that make for audience class distinctions at the old opera house.

What, No Horseshoe?

But many believe that only a handful of people go to the opera because they really care about the music and singing in what Mr. Paul D. Cravath called "perhaps the last of our Victorian expressions."

The rest, when they go, want to see the good old fashioned sights and mainly the holty-toity diamond horseshoe. To revive opera, they argue, the social glamor of the institution must be polished up to its former sheen.

If the latter theory is to be upheld—and if opera does move into the music hall—the architects will have to get busy.

There is no place for a diamond horseshoe in the auditorium now. The three stubby balconies break off so far in the rear of the house that a row of bejeweled mezzanine perchers would be lost to view. And a few dozen glittery Van Astorbilts sprinkled among the several thousand commoners in the orchestra seats would cut no figure at all.

Swedish Chili Maker

Alex, the Swedish chili man, is gone from the little hole in the wall on Seventh avenue, near the Broadway intersection. His old stand now is occupied by Spanish-looking folk, but Alex, I'm happy to report, is not gone from the night scene.

Just about every one who struts the Stem dropped into that two-by-four counter cafe for chili and tamales at some time in the gray dawning I've seen some of the the fanciest of the Broadway folk in there, bumping elbows with human drift.

Tall blond Alex, serious but chatty, seemed never to be absent—then, all at once, he left his post.

The other night I dropped into a new chili house on Forty-seventh, across from the Palace stage door, and who should grin from behind the counter but Alex. He has got himself this new place with a little more elbow room—even a few tables.

I asked Alex, who was born in Sweden, how he ever got into the chili and tamale business, anyway. He said he just happened to spend some time in San Antonio, and volunteered:

"People always think it funny that a Swedish fellow should be making chili."

Jah, Jah.

Propose Fifteen Basic Law Changes

Proposed amendments to the state constitution for the first time pass the present session of the general assembly cannot be voted on before November, 1933. So far fifteen such resolutions have been introduced, six in the senate and nine in the house, according to a compilation made by the election bureau, department of state. To date none has received favorable consideration.

Five that have received the approval of two sessions have been advertised once and will be again advertised and printed on the ballot next November.

Ten proposed for the first time at the 1931 regular session, and four at the 1932 extraordinary session must be again approved by the present session, otherwise they fail. Any of the fourteen that are again approved will also be advertised a second time and placed on the ballot in November.

SCHOOL COSTS

The cost of educating a child during 1933 is estimated at 48.7 cents per day, according to the United States office of education at Washington. The department of public instruction estimates that $10,000,000 less is being spent in Pennsylvania for education this year than last.

Never Neglect Constipation

Sickness Often Follows

If you are troubled with constipation you should lose no time in putting an end to this terrible scourge. Physicians claim that over 75% of all ailments can be traced directly to a constipated condition of the bowels, and one well-known scientist goes as far as to say that 25% of the waste matter in the colon is absolutely poisonous.

Unless this waste matter is promptly eliminated, these poisons find their way into the blood stream and a whole legion of ailments spring up. If your condition has gone unchecked, it is very likely that this process is now under way and if not ended at once, serious trouble might develop. Natex, because of its natural yet thorough action on the bowels, is now recognized as the safe, sure way to end constipation.

Natex is the prescription of a college professor. Contains from three to five times as much real medicine as ordinary tonics. It costs a little more but it is well worth it. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. For FREE SAMPLE send this adv. and 10c to The Natex Co., Inc., 219 W. Saratoga St., Baltimore Md.
